Emily James

Year of Call: 1999

Practice Overview

Emily is a specialist family law leading junior who acts in a wide range of complex and sensitive cases relating to private and public law children. She regularly appears in the High Court and has acted in a number of very significant cases in the Court of Appeal.

Emily is Directory Ranked as a Leading Junior. She has a loyal following of excellent solicitors, many of whom are top ranked, with whom she works closely.

Children (Private Law)

In private children law Emily's practice includes especially complex cases which require separate representation of children or involve domestic abuse and/or parental alienation. Emily has a particular interest in the application of Practice Direction 12J to cases which involve allegations of domestic abuse, including coercive or controlling behaviour as well as national and international relocation.

Emily's work in Family Law Act proceedings including representing those seeking or responding to applications for injunctive relief or occupation orders relating to the family home.

Emily is frequently instructed on behalf of vulnerable adults or children and is particularly sensitive to clients with learning disabilities, special needs or mental health difficulties. She has frequently been instructed to act through the Official Solicitor when a client lacks litigation capacity.

Children (Public Law)

In public Law matters Emily's work involves care, placement and adoption proceedings acting on behalf of guardians, parents, other family members and local authorities. Emily's cases often involve non accidental injury or death, sexual abuse or fabricated and induced illness.

International Family Law

Emily's work often involves an international element such as international child abduction, inherent jurisdiction and wardship.
